Lange's legacy beyond 'Boat'

Monica L. Ewing
DAILY STAFF WRITER

Ted Lange has always known what he wanted to do.

He had grown up watching his father, a Shakespearean actor, perform on a Los Angeles stage.

His mother, Jerri Lange, said that when he was 6 years old, he told her, "Mommy, when I grow up, I'm going to be a star."

"All I had to do was get out of his way so I couldn't be trampled to death," she said.

Now, at the age of 52, with 30 years experience in show business behind him, Ted Lange said, "I changed my mind, I would rather be an actor."

With a lot of hard work and a little bit of luck, Ted Lange has been living his dream.

Lange is best known for his role as bartender Isaac Washington in "The Love Boat" television series that spanned 10 seasons, a role his mother said he got without auditioning.

She said the head of the ABC television network, Fred Silverman, saw him perform in a short-lived television series called "Mr. T and Tina," and was impressed by his work ethic and talent.

Later, she said he was teased by the rest of the cast because he "waltzed into 'Love Boat,'" while everyone else had to audition.

"I loved the cast," Ted Lange said. "You took some movie actors that you always wanted to work with and you made a TV show that you knew everyone was going to watch. I'd say that was a pretty good deal."

Michael Lange, who is a lecturer for recreation and leisure studies at San Jose State University, said it was a thrill for his brother to direct Fred MacMurray in an episode of "The Love Boat" after the two of them grew up watching him play the father on "My Three Sons."

Ted Lange said he also enjoyed traveling around the world and being treated like royalty by the locals.

Michael Lange said his brother took four trips abroad each season to film on location at major ports of call. After 10 seasons, Ted Lange was able to see much of the world and got paid to do it.

"Brenda Vaccaro (who guest-starred on 'The Love Boat') and I, and Fred Grandy (who played Gopher), we must have laughed from one end of Hong Kong to the other," Ted Lange said. "And when I wasn't hanging out with (them) ... I was getting drunk and telling

San Jose State University's concert choir and choraliers practice Thursday for the Spring Benefit Concert and Anniversary Concert of Dr. Charlene Archibeque, who is celebrating her 30th anniversary of teaching at SJSU. The concert is scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m. Saturday at St. Joseph Cathedral.

Spring choral concert will honor Archibeque's 30-year career as conductor

When Charlene Archibeque applied for the position of choral conductor at San Jose State University in 1970, she was met with some resistance from the School of Music and Dance's search committee.

It was a common belief among musicians at the time that women just weren't up to the job of conducting at the university level. The other two applicants were men.

Fortunately, Gibson Walters, then the school's dean, knew Archibeque, then a choral conductor at Mesa College in San Diego, and respected her talent and her fine reputation in the state.

Let's leave sex out of this," Walters told the committee. "Let's hire the best person."

Fortunately, the committee did just that by hiring Archibeque, now the director of choral activities and conductor of the Choraliers, and well-known music arranger and composer. She was named the outstanding professor at SJSU for 1984-85 and the 1993 President's Scholar — an award given to faculty members for outstanding creative and scholastic achievement.

This year's spring choral concert is in honor of Archibeque's 30-year anniversary at SJSU. The concert, which features the Choraliers, as well as the chorale and the concert choir, directed by associate professor Elena Sharkova, will begin at 8:30 p.m. Saturday at St. Joseph's Cathedral Basilica.

Archibeque said that in she was the only choral conductor at a four-year university west of the Mississippi. Sharkova, a St. Petersburg, Russia, native who came to SJSU in 1998 from Western

The Seventh Street barbecue pit area resembled a giant playground with children clustered around life-size puppets such as Miss Piggy and McGruff, the crime dog.

Take Our Children To Work Day is an annual event sponsored by the San Jose State University's human resources department to encourage staff and faculty to bring their children to work. Although nationally Take Our Daughters To Work Day was celebrated Thursday, SJSU established its own version three years ago.

As part of parent/kid day, a lunch from noon to 1:30 p.m. was provided at the barbecue pit, where children played and parents mingled.

Fifty kids and their parents participated in the event, which took place from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and included such activities as a tour of the university, according to Gloria Chacon, coordinator of the event.

"We wanted the kids to have fun, but the purpose of this event is for children to observe their parents in the workplace and to give them exposure to the university," Chacon said.

She also said the university gives fee-waiver benefits to students who are children of staff and faculty.

Among the activities held at lunch time was a child identification and fingerprinting program provided by the University Police Department.

As a method of crime prevention, UPD took the fingerprints of children upon the consent of their parents and gave out information on crime prevention.

"The child identification record is helpful to have in the event that anything should happen to any kid," Sergeant James Renelle of the UPD said.

Another activity that children lined up for was face painting by Fung Yee Lam, a graphic designs

Janitors' plight warrants help of citizens

The news was both good and bad for the janitors of Los Angeles, who ended their three-week strike with the ratification of their three-year contract this week.

The good news: The janitors were given a 70 cent per hour increase for the first year of the contract, followed by a 60 cent increase for each of the following two years.

The bad news: The janitors, whose average wage is $6.90 per hour, were asking for a $1-per-hour increase this year and each of the following two years, which would have brought their hourly wage to just under $10.

Instead, in three years from now, their hourly pay will be $8.80.

The difference may not seem like much, but 10 bucks in the L.A. area hardly resembles a livable wage.

A representative from the janitors' union noted that once union members receive their raises, they will then finally be above the poverty line.

These are workers sorely needed to maintain a clean environment in some of the most prominent office space in the country.

In addition, the L.A. strike was not the end of the union's effort to gain higher wages. They plan to expand, if slightly, the scope of their demands for living wages.

The janitors' union has plans to begin negotiations for the Bay Area contracts before the contracts end May 31.

We, at the Daily, are asking for the campus community to support the janitors in their fight for a fair wage.

Beside the fact that janitorial work is an honest living, deserving a decent pay, janitors are being taken advantage of because the majority of them are migrant workers.

Is this a return to the pre-Cesar Chavez era?

Negotiators in the Los Angeles strike contended that the cost of additional insurance for health-related needs — which the janitors' union sought — would raise operating costs beyond a limit that would still allow for higher wages.

As far as the Bay Area, where health packages are almost always included for employees, it makes sense for the janitors' union to demand health benefits.

In an area as rich as Santa Clara Valley — where millionaires are made every day — the high cost of living demands higher wages.

It would be shameful if we, as citizens, were to allow a million-dollar home in every neighborhood without ensuring a living wage in every bank account.

Class attendance barrier to successful semester

Here's the situation. I have noticed the semester is winding down because my friends have begun to write term papers and prepare for final exams.

The onset of summer should be great news.

Summer means sleeping in late, spending days at the beach and drinking margaritas in the afternoon.

However, I find the semester's end to be quite disturbing, mostly because I haven't actually attended my classes since ... well, let's not go into the ugly details of it all. But trust me, even when I was going to class, I wasn't attending on a regular basis.

I can't quite pinpoint what happened this semester that transformed me into a failing student.

Apparently, I didn't notice the progressive transition from walking into class late to missing class once a week to not showing up at all.

Having never been in this situation before, I figured there was just a way out.

I would simply apologize to my

Christina Lucarotti

FRIDAY CONFESSION

professors and withdraw from my courses.

My rationalization for accepting a "W" was that, after so many years in school, one glitched semester on my transcript couldn't make that much of a difference when applying to grad school.

Then, I was informed there was a deadline to withdraw.

Note to administration: Just a guess, but the people who need to withdraw from classes are probably the same ones who have difficulty meeting deadlines.

From what I've been told, students wishing to withdraw from a course need a justifiable cause, such as a medical reason or death in the family.

Thankfully, I have not lost a loved one or been diagnosed with a mental or medical illness.

However, in this case, my good fortune — for which I am forever grateful — is not working in my favor.

I'm still staying up late, losing sleep over the fact that I have to face my professors and explain my appalling lack of attendance to them, not to mention my parents, who will also be asking for an explanation.

Any suggestions on how to break the news to my loving parents that their daughter, who is a seemingly responsible young adult, has nosedived into the realms of academic recklessness?

I didn't think so.

I suppose the upside of my slaming into the brick wall of failure now is that I will become familiar with the effects of such a crash while I'm still young.

I'm afraid if I put off screwing up for too long, the shock of it all might win me a daily visit to the therapist and a lifetime supply of Prozac.

Of course, I wish I could avoid failure altogether or press rewind and start again.

But life is life. It will not wait, and it does not care if I fail or succeed.

As for this failure, if what everyone says is true, it will build character.

As for my professors, expect to see me in your office sometime this week. I will want to discuss taking your course again in the fall.

As for my parents, I'm sure you understand, but for the record, I'm sorry.

Dating difficulties solved by divorce guidelines

Don't get married. And if you do get married, stay married. This may seem harsh, but it's really not. I just don't want to deal with divorce.

Divorce seems to be coming between me and my dreams.

I want it all.

I want the loving husband, 2.5 kids and a dog and a cat.

Unfortunately, to get it all, some say I must date.

Beyond the fact that I abhor dating, there's the selection process. Picking out a normal person seems to pose quite a problem for me.

One day, I ran into an old friend from high school, seemingly normal. And as we talked, we found we had more in common at this point in our lives than ever before.

My dude and I were on the first date, and we were having a great time. Good conversation, laughter and attraction were all present between the two of us.

As we went into a little more detail about the history of our lives and what had happened to us since high school, I found out something that would bring the possibility of a second date to a screeching halt.

He has baggage.

I don't mean luggage. I mean real-live baggage, as in an ex-wife and a child.

Now, I love children and can honestly say that I wouldn't mind an instant family, but I could really do without the ex-wife.

I don't want some other woman dictating how much, or how little, I can do with my husband through the reigns of joint custody.

The whole every-other-weekend visitations and planning our holidays around the plans of an ex-wife doesn't quite suit my view of how the married life should be. If people would stay married, maybe this wouldn't be an issue.

As I get older, the reality of single parents in the dating world has been shoved in my face, at least a couple of times now.

My generation has probably all heard the statistics showing that divorces are more prevalent than ever. According to the United States Census Bureau, in 1998, there were about 355,000 divorced men and women within my age range, which is 20 to 24.

The results of the census that is still being conducted will be out in the next year, and I would bet money these figures have only increased in the last two years.

But if you have led a sheltered life like me, divorce is not something to be viewed in a positive light, as the growing statistics seem to indicate.

I have escaped the turmoil of divorce for nearly all of my life. My parents have been married for more than 30 years, and only two out of my nine siblings have ever divorced.

Andi Anderson

STAFF WRITER

Personally, I don't want to go through a divorce or deal with the effects of such a process.

If a person has been married and divorced by age 24, they have problems.

When dating a person who has divorced, I am always curious to hear the other side of the story. The man will probably say some choice things about his ex-wife, but wouldn't you wonder what she had to say about him?

What happened, and why didn't the couple work to stay together, at least for the sake of the child? If the relationship was not abusive, why couldn't the couple remain together and avoid splitting the household.

I don't want to date a quitter, much less marry a man who is quick to give up. To spare myself — and other single people who are dating — from the negative effects of divorce, I have established some guidelines.

There should be mandatory counseling sessions before the state allows a couple to divorce. Marriage is not only a religious union, but a union that is also recognized by the state.

These days, people are quick to give up on something that requires hard work. There should be some sort of mandatory meeting with the ex before the new partner is allowed to marry a person. That would be fair. After all, you would get both sides of the breakup story.

I don't want to take the chance of dating a man who, at any second, could go back to his ex-wife, the mother of his child.

Am I a coward? Probably. But I stand strong in the faith that eventually I will find that perfect man, who feels the same way I do.

I won't be bringing baggage into a relationship, and I only ask the same of the men I choose to date.

Michigan University, credits Archibeque's talent, drive and reputation for her (Sharkova) being hired to conduct a university choir.

"Without her, I wouldn't be sitting here," Sharkova said. "She was one of the first to break the male domination of choral conducting."

Sharkova also respects Archibeque's special gift for teaching.

"Any state you go to, you will find people whose lives she has influenced immensely," Sharkova said. "She is a teacher in the most broad sense. She teaches not only music, but so much more to students."

Members of the Choraliers share Sharkova's respect for Archibeque's talent as a musician and a conductor and her generosity as an instructor.

"She's very demanding, but it's worth all the hard work because of all she gives back," said Tiffany Unarce, a sophomore voice major.

Senior Justine Thorpe, also a voice major, respects the depth of Archibeque's knowledge and talent for musical interpretation. "Everything in the music comes through her," Thorpe said.

The public will hear Archibeque's and Sharkova's choirs perform selections by Sergei Rachmaninoff, Anton Bruckner and J.S. Bach, among others, in the wonderful acoustics of the high-domed St. Josephs Cathedral Basilica. Saturday evening, the Choraliers will sing Archibeque's own composition, "The Cooling Shadow."

The performance also includes several spirituals, including "It's All Over Me," arranged by Archibeque's longtime friend, Jester Hairston, who died last January at the age of 98. Twenty-five SJSU choir alumni will join the combined choirs for the final selection, "Old Time Religion."

It was a 1998 St. Patrick's Day concert conducted by Archibeque that inspired Paul Ingraham to join the Choraliers that same year. Ingraham, a continuing education student at SJSU, is also assistant director of the Masterworks Chorale at the College of San Mateo and on the board of directors of the Schola Cantorum in Mountain View.

"She is extremely knowledgeable," Ingraham said. "I have a lot of respect for what she knows and what she does."

NFL bound

Football players answer NFL's call; sign free agent contracts

Marcus R. Fuller
DAILY STAFF WRITER

The 2000 NFL Draft April 15 came and went, and absent were the names of any San Jose State University football players. Luckily, NFL teams, needing to fill vacancies on their summer practice rosters, signed a number of free agents following draft day.

Among the 515 free agents, who signed with 31 different NFL clubs, were three members of the 1999 SJSU football team.

With the opportunity to represent the school in the NFL, Spartans Tim Morgan, Sam Sherrod and Abdul-Salam Noah will make their way to their respective teams this summer to compete for a spot on a preseason roster — the first step to making the team.

SJSU kicker/punter Morgan, who will join the Cincinnati Bengals, was, according to Spartan head coach Dave Baldwin, "the sleeper" of the bunch.

"In his first season as our kicker, he did a decent job. Then he came back the next year and was an all-WAC selection," Baldwin said. "I think the scouts are looking at his potential because he's been kicking for only two seasons and has already accomplished a lot."

The Vallejo native averaged 44.0 yards per punt last season, which led the Western Athletic Conference, and ranked 10th nationally.

While performing kicking duties for the Spartans in 1999, Morgan tied for second on the team in scoring with 36 points. His field goal in the 44-39 win against Stanford Nov. 2 was the longest made of the season at 44 yards.

Morgan said he first had aspirations of playing professional football while attending Solano College.

"Ever since I started playing back in junior college, my coaches have been telling me that I could play there (NFL)," Morgan said. "After that I just started working harder and harder, and it started looking like I had a chance."

On the receiving end of Morgan's punts this summer will be Florida State receiver Peter Warrick, who was selected fourth overall by the Bengals in the first round of the NFL Draft.

"He was the best in college, and now I'm going to be kicking to him everyday in practice," Morgan said about the Sugar Bowl MVP. "I feel fortunate enough to be playing with some of the best players."

Before joining the team as a walk-on in 1998, Morgan played football for the first time at Solano, where he also used his 6-foot-6-inch frame to play on the basketball team.

Now that he's reached his goal of making it to the NFL, Morgan now is set on becoming the best kicker on the Bengals team.

"My goal now is to be the starter," Morgan said. "I have to go there and compete just like I did here."

Sherrod, a 6-foot-4, 253 pound defensive end signed with the 1999 Super Bowl Champion St. Louis Rams. He is the second SJSU player to sign with the Rams in the last two years. Last season, former Spartan James Hodgins won a Super Bowl ring while playing fullback for St. Louis.

Sherrod said he hasn't spoken with Hodgins, but he's excited about the chance to play with World Champions.

"I'm really happy to be with St. Louis. It's a great opportunity for me to play with a great team like that," Sherrod said. "I tried to get ahold of him but we were unable to connect, but I'm going to a mini camp this weekend and I'll see him there," he said about Hodgins.

As five-year member of the Spartans, Sherrod was the team leader in sacks each of the last two seasons ('98 and '99).

Baldwin said he expected Sherrod to be picked up even though he was bothered for most of the '99 season by a pectoral injury he suffered in spring practice.

"He's a young man, who we definitely thought should have been drafted," Baldwin said. "He has a bright future if he can stay healthy."

Sherrod said getting tips from his half-brother — Martin Harrison, who played for many NFL teams, including the San Francisco 49ers — has prepared him to compete in the league.

"He gives me a lot of pointers on the NFL — what's good about it and what's bad about it," Sherrod said. "So, I'm going in probably more prepared than some others."

Probably the most improved of the three players is Noah, according to Baldwin, who referred to him as the "Ultimate Warrior".

"It's been tough for him being an inner city kid from L.A., moving to San Jose. But he's going to graduate," Baldwin said. "He's gotten better every year, and he has a great future ahead of him."

Noah, who was a three-year starter for SJSU at defensive tackle, signed with the Oakland Raiders.

The 276-pound senior also led the '99 team in tackles behind the line of scrimmage.

Despite Baldwin's acknowledgment of the achievement of his three former players, he added that the difficult task of making the team is still ahead of them.

"We're always excited when one of our guys get an opportunity to play pro football," Baldwin said. "But they're not there yet. They have to compete against the cream of the crop and deal with the financial situation. Teams have to have salary cap room in order to sign free agents."

"It's all about being at the right place at the right time, and you never know where that place is going to be," he said.

Staff report

The Spartan softball team swept a doubleheader against Santa Clara Wednesday to improve its record to 17-27.

In the double dip played at Santa Clara's Marsalli Field, the Spartans came away with victories of 4-1 and 4-3.

In the first game of the doubleheader, San Jose State University got a strong outing on the mound from Christine Akin.

Akin, picking up her seventh win of the year, allowed only six hits while giving up one run to the Broncos.

Facing a 1-0 deficit, the Spartans got all their runs in the sixth inning with a four-run rally that was sparked by catcher Roxanne Staniorski.

Staniorski doubled to center field to drive in three runs, and Veronica Ramos followed with a single for SJSU's final run of the game.

In the second game, the Spartans got another complete game performance on the mound, this time from Brooke Reed. Reed scattered 10 hits while allowing the Broncos to post three runs.

However, the Spartans picked up where they left off in the first game by jumping to a quick 2-0 lead in the first inning.

SJSU added runs in the third and fourth inning before Santa Clara scored one in the bottom of the fourth and posted a two-spot in the fifth.

The Spartans return to action Saturday at the SJSU Field when they take on Fresno State, and Sunday against Loyola Marymount.

Modesto edges Giants in screamer

Andi Anderson
DAILY STAFF WRITER

Keith Comstock huffed and puffed, but he still couldn't blow down the Modesto A's.

All the arguing on the field couldn't help the San Jose Giants beat the Modesto A's in a 6-3 loss Wednesday at Municipal Stadium, but it did help Comstock get ejected.

"My approach to baseball isn't boring," said Comstock, manager of the Giants.

Wednesday's Score

Modesto A's	6
San Jose Giants	3

Today: Giants vs. Oaks 7 p.m.

Modesto's approach to the first inning wasn't boring either, as the A's started off the game with a bang when center fielder Ryan Ludwick singled to right field bringing home Mike Lockwood.

The Giants kept in pace with the A's as Joe Jester stepped up to the plate and sent the ball flying over the left field fence for a home run, his first of the season. The solo homer tied the game, 1-1.

Following Jester's attack in the bottom of the first, Modesto broke the tie when Germain Chirinos homered to left field.

The Giants waited until the bottom of the sixth to make any offensive moves. Clay Green and Carlos Mendoza started off the inning with singles to left and center fields, respectively. After a Modesto pitching change brought Mike Holmes in for Juan Pena, first baseman Sean McGowan singled to center, allowing Mendoza

San Jose Giants catcher Sammy Serrano attempts to tag out Modesto A's outfielder Germain Chirinos at home plate during a game Wednesday at Municipal Stadium. The umpire called Chirinos safe at and Greene to score and making the score 3-2.

The A's came back in the eighth as Caonabo Cosme singled to right field, advancing Chirinos to third, and Miguel Olivio came in to score an unearned run on an error by right fielder Ryan Pini.

the plate, which enraged Giants' manager Keith Comstock, who was ejected during the Giants 6-3 loss.

When the umpire made the call, Comstock came out of the dugout and stood chest to chest with the umpire for about four minutes, continually yelling in the official's face. That prompted the umpire to send Comstock to the showers an inning early.

"I'm not really happy with the way we're playing. We're just not playing good baseball."

— Keith Comstock
Giants manager

"He flat-out blew the call," Comstock said.

Following the heated inning, Modesto continued to dominate the game in the ninth inning, when Lockwood singled to start the rally. Nick Sosa followed with a double to left field, hauling Lockwood in to score. Jesus Basabe then came home for an unearned score when the Giants' shortstop, Mendoza, overthrew home plate.

The loss dropped the Giants (10-10) behind the A's (11-9) in the California League standings, and secured the No. 1 position for the Visalia Oaks.

Comstock said he was not impressed with the nonaggressive style San Jose has been playing in the league.

"At the 10-10 mark, I'm not really happy with the way we're playing," Comstock said. "We're just not playing good baseball."

Comstock said even though the team is not playing as he feels it should, there is still plenty of time left in the first half to improve the Giants' record.

Today, the Giants play game two of a four-game series at home against the Visalia Oaks.

vote in the eddie bauer commencement cup challenge and win a live webcast of your university graduation.
(guess that liberal arts degree can get you on the cutting edge of technology after all.)

From now through May 1, 2000, vote for your favorite university or college to win the first Eddie Bauer Commencement Cup Challenge powered by YAHOO! Careers. Three of the winning schools will have their main graduation commencement broadcast live over the Internet.

There will be a total of nine winning colleges and universities. Winners will receive one of three prizes: a live video webcast; a live audio-only webcast and an archive of the video portion of the ceremony; or an on-demand video archive.

Your voting and registration pages are accessible at Eddie Bauer (<http://www.eddiebauer.com>) and also at Yahoo! Careers (<http://careers.yahoo.com>), where the official rules of entry may be found. All winning colleges will be notified by Tuesday, May 2. So be a winner as well as a graduate, and vote now.
